

XYZ

1

Write the question up clearly and simply in front of the group.

2

Each person has three pieces of paper, labelled X, Y and Z.

3

The people work in pairs to think of three solutions, answers or actions in response to the question:

- X is something that could be done straight away to address the issue
- Y is something that will take longer, but could be done this year
- Z is a weird idea that would address the issue, but may not be possible in this life! (but might suggest something else)

4

Post all the ideas up on the wall and then use one of the other techniques to evaluate and prioritise them.

PROS

Allows for discussion of long term and short-term ideas

Promotes small group discussion which can be good for less confident students

CONS

Time consuming

May become disorderly and confusing
